27th January 2023 Bulletin

Headteacher update:

A lot of conversation (and work) has taken place this week regarding the upcoming planned teacher strike action on Wednesday 1st February. I am sure many of you will have seen and heard the views of many in the school workforce and will respect the choices of people who choose to make the difficult decision to strike. We understand that school closure will have a large impact on families and thank all of our parent/carers for their understanding.

My discussions with children today have centred around the environment. I was really happy to be celebrating the efforts of each child and their commitment to 'active travel' last week. Each family made an effort, which will go in some small way to protect our environment.

We also talked about the 'Big Garden Birdwatch' that is due to take place again this weekend. The call is for people to spend an hour surveying the birds that they see in their garden during an hour period this weekend. This would be a great activity at home or if you are about and about near any greenspace this weekend. For more information click here to see the page on the Newsround site (children enjoyed trying to identify the origins of different birdsongs
